A PARENT Today

A lot of parents feel that children today are very different from those of our generation. What they do not realize is that they as parents appears to be more aware and more concerned about his child's upbringing. He/She realizes the importance of this task and wants to do the best and gives the child the best. But in doing so they often try and give them what we did not get as children.

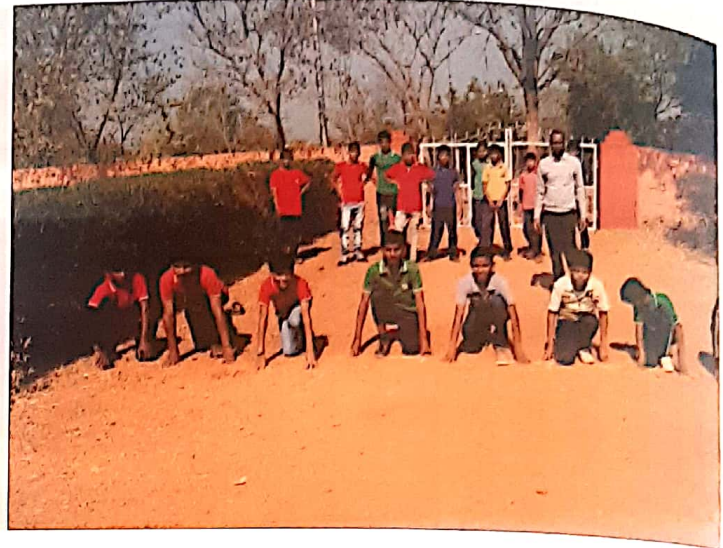

If I wanted a remote control car and did not get it, I shall try to give it to my child "Nothing wrong in that but one has to strike a balance., and not forget to give them. "What we got" from our parents in terms of good values and time, there is just no replacement for that.

A parent may wish to protect his child from 'bad' influence. But in doing so, one should not become overprotective and over bearing. Independence should be encouraged, Remember Love is not dependent. If parent are employee them child care becomes a responsibility of grandparents.

Many times friction arises between parents and grandparents about different ways of child care the mother if working may feel very guilty and over indulge the child on the other hand be very strict, over discipline and push the child especially; if her; ambitions have been curbed due to child bearing. It is important for both the parents to be emotionally healthy and balanced.
